Revolt of 1857

At the time of Revolt

- Emperor of India – Bahadur Shah Zafar
- Prime Minister of England – Palmerston
- Governor General of India – Lord Canning
- Army chief of Company – George Anison
- Army chief appointed after revolt begun – Collin Campwell

Form of the revolt -

– The revolt after the completion of 100 years of establishment of the British rule is known as many names –

Most famous names

- Revolt of soldiers
- National movement
- National Revolt
- Others ---

The Indian historians believe it.

→ The famous leader of Britain 'Benjamin Israeli told this to the 'HOUSE of COMMONS' on 27 July 1857.

– This movement started with soldier revolt but it took the form of Political movement in the End.

Reasons of Revolt -

There were many reasons for revolt of 1857.

- Political
- Social
- Religious

- The main reason behind this revolt was the inhuman behaviour of British towards the Indians.

Political Reason-

- In 1803, To keep the Mughal Emperor in British protection.
- To ban the Diwan-i-aam, and Diwan-i-Khas (by the british)
- In 1856, Awadh was merged to British Empire

- The British stop giving pension to adopted son 'Nana sahib', of Bajirao II (Peshwa).
- Abolish the title of the kings of Karnatka, Surat and Tanjore.
- Not keeping Indians to the higher post.

Financial reasons

- The Policy of Economic Exploitation by British.
  - New Land System
  - Increase in tax
  - Demolish the Indian trades
  - Occuping land in exchange to debt.
- Control over trade (by British)

2. Social-Religious Reasons

- Prohibition of sati practice, child marrige, infanticide.
- Support to widow marrige
  Calling Indians - Black & Pig.
  Banned Entry of Indians in Hotels and clubs.
- Permitting the Missioneries to preach the christain religion in India.

- In April 1850, the 'Lex Loci Act' was formed.
  - changes in Hindu tradition through Religious disqualification Act.
- Banning of adoption by Dalhousie.
  This was believed among Hindu Theology.

3. Military Reasons

- There were 2 lakh 38 thousand Indian Soldiers and 45 thousand British Soldiers → 5:1 (The salary of Indian soldiers was only 7 rupees / month)
  Only British soldiers were on higher Post (more salary)

Reasons of failure

- limited form of revolt
- non-particaption of Indian kings (treachery).
- lack of elligble leadership
- lack of unity
- lack of stated goals
- limited resources
- lack of public support
  - (i) apathy of educated class.
  - (ii) Neglect of the peasents

Importance of Revolt –

(i) Indians can't get Independence from British only through Army and power but support from erery class, and Patriotism was also neccessary.

(ii) After the revolt of 1857, the feeling of Patriotism rose in the Indians.

(iii) After the revolt British goremment focused to develope and reform the internal situation of the country.

Result of the Revolt

Queen Victoria's menifesto –

On 1 November 1858, Lord Canning organised his court in Minto park and read the menifesto of Queen Victoria.

(i) The reins of the governance were taken out of the hands of the company and passed into the hands of the crown.
The Governor-General is know called Viceroy.

(ii) The British government became directly responsible for Indian affairs.

(iii) Policy of state annexation and right of adoption granted.

(iv) The government will not interfere in the religious and social matters of Indians.

(v) Ratio of the Army - Indian : British

Before - 5 : 1
After - 2 : 1

- The numbers of Indian soldiers were reduced to 1 lakh 40 thousand from 2 lakh 38 thousand
- The Artillery was in hands of British.
- The number of Awadh and Bengal soldiers was reduced and the punjab and Gorkha soldiers were kept at their place.

(vi) A new officer 'Secretary of India' was appointed to take care of India.

- A 15-member council of ministers was formed with its help.
  - 8 were appointed by the government.
  - 7 were appointed by the 'court of Directors'.

(vii) After the revolt, the British used to take side of Hindus and hated Muslims.
(Divide and Rule Policy)

18th Century India

First half of 18th Century

Political Scenario of India after dissolution of Mughal Empire -

(1) Successor state

(1) Bengal -

In 1700, Aurangzeb made murshid kuli khan the Diwan of Bengal, After the death of Aurangzeb, he also took the power of Nazim, (Subedar) to his hand. After that he was called as the Nawab of Bengal. After, his sucessor Aliwardi khan (Suja-ud-din, Sarfaraz Khan) stopped giving Rerenue to the Mughal Empire.

(2) Awadh -

In the leadership of a Mughal Aamir Sadat Khan, Awadh was established as an independent state. His successor Safdar Jung got the post of Mughal Wazir. Then the Nawab of Bengal played a important role in the politics of Delhi and further know as Nawab Wazir.

(3) Hyderabad -

The fouder of Independent state of Hyderabad was Nizam-ul-mulk Asaf-Jah. He was at the post of Wazir under the mughal Emperor Muhammad Shah Rangeela. And wanted to bring efficiency in the Mughal Administrative Services but failed because of his vested interests. In 1724, established a separate Hyderabad and starting his finding his future there.

Establishment of Rebellion state

Maratha Rajya -

from Maratha Empire -

Marathas belonged to Zamindar class. They started their services under Deccan State and Mughals. Then they strengthen their position by taking the advantage of the struggle in Deccan.

② In 17th century, A Maratha state was established under the leadership of Shivaji. Further taking the advantage of weakness of Mughal Empire under Peshwa, a large Maratha Empire was established. During the rule of Balaji Bajirao, Marathas were organised as Maratha Confideracy. Its centre was Peshwa of Puna and other unities were Holkar of Indore, Singhia of Gwalior, Gaikwad of Baroda, Bhonsale of Nagpur. Then there was a time when it seemed that the Maratha Empire will be able to provide a alternative to the Mughal Empire but it could not happen and the reason behind it was the internal weakness of Maratha Empire.

Sikh Empire -

Sikh was a religious group which was based on the teachings of Guru Nanak. Sikhism emphasis was on religious and social equality. But perhaps the divided medieval society based on feudal values was not ready to accept such a sense of equality. One the other hand due to the organisation of Sangat and Langar system, the sikhs developed a sense communism. Later as a result of Mughal conflict, it was organised as a military force. The martyrdom of Guru Arjun Dev and Guru Teg Bahadur made a peacefully organised sect agressive, but initially it was not successful, but when after the third battle of Panipat in 1761, a political vaccum was created in North-west. Taking advantage of this, in 1764, the leaders of some prominent sikhs gathered in Amritsar and established and Independent Sikh state in the name of Wahe Guru Ki Khalsa. There was another reason behind the success of the Sikhs. In the beginning, the supporters of Guru Nanak and his successors were mainly traders, because Guru Nanak himself was a Khatri and associated with Vyagar, but later the Sikh sect got the support of the farmers. Thus, its support base has expanded.

Jaat state -

In the beginning, Gokul Jat and after that Rajaram Jat revolt against British but Aurangzeb supressed these revolts. Then further in 18th century's first half, under Badan singh and chudaman independent state of Jaat was established.

Rohillas -

A Rohilla Aamir, Ali Muhammad khan established a Rohilla dynasty by taking the advantage of the dissolution of Mughal Empire. It was established in the North of Awadh.

Bangash Pathans -

Muhammad khan Bangash established a Independent Bangash Pathan state (near ganga river).

Autonomous region

Guided By - ASHUTOSH PANDEY SIR

Rajpoot state -

Rajput rulers were in the service of Mughals but their state was not in direct control of Mughals. And after the dissolution of Mughals, they established as autonomous state and the most important state among them was the state of Amer.

Maysore -

The state of Mysore was the successor of Vijaynagar Empire. In the 18th century, the wadiyar dynasty ruled over it but then an important Army officer emerged (Haider Ali) and became the ruler of Mysore by controlling the Administration. Haider Ali and Tipu Sultan proved as very elligble ruler. But their rising power made their conflict with British mandatory.

Travancore -

It was an important state in the Kerala region. Its ruler Martand Verma Organised his Navy very better way. They made the departure of the Dutch from India inevitable by defeating them.

Calicut -

It was established as a independent state under Jamorin. It represented the most important port at Malabar coast. Jamorin had protected Vasco-da-gama

Different approaches prevalent in evaluting Indian history in the first half of 18th Century -

In the viewpoint of imperialist historians -

The contemporary British authors voltas and Haulwell declared it 'Age of darkness' anticipating disintegration and decline period. But in 20th century, a British Partisan writer, Sir Jadunath Sarkar also declared it as the age of darkness and confirmed this fact.

Basis for calling it the Age of Darkness -

Considering it as a period of political and unbridled-ness, It was beliered that the disintergration of the Mughal Empire had brought about a major political upheavel. The Marathas were taking advantage of this situation and looting. Hence, there was insecurity of life and property in Hindustan. This situation continued till the establishment of British power in the latter half of 18th century.
